¹ With a Site License, AEDT may be installed on any number of computers within End User's immediate office, which is defined as a single organizational unit or entity, having a unique function, comprising one or more contiguous rooms in a single location, and any and all persons using these copies are also End Users. This license also authorizes End User to use the Software on portable computers while on official travel and on home computers, so long as all such use is on behalf of the office for which the Software License was purchased.

Branch offices and sub-offices not located at the same geographic location are not licensed to use this software even if the software may be stored on a portable computer, unless an additional site license is purchased for that location. If you have any questions as to the validity of your End User License or questions with purchasing AEDT, please contact us at aedt-support@dot.gov.

² Requires an annual renewal fee of $11,250

US Federal Government Agencies: US Federal Government agencies receive AEDT 2a at no cost. A written request must be submitted to AEDT Technical Support at aedt-support@dot.gov in the form of a scanned copy of the request on agency letterhead. Please include the applicant's name, company name, address, telephone number, and number of site licenses requested.

Contractors Performing Federal Government Work: If you are requesting a free copy of AEDT 2a for a federal government project and you are not a member of a federal government agency, you must submit a written request to AEDT Technical Support at aedt-support@dot.gov with a scanned copy of the letter on the agency letterhead from the government sponsor describing work that the contractor will be doing. Please include the applicant's name, company name, address, telephone number, and number of site licenses requested.
